Content

The Archive of Time, Location, and History

For this project, I would like to make a digital archive of road maps, travel brochures, and tourist postcards from various eras in history. The contents will come from online and offline research, as well as my personal collection.

Customs Hints

For All Persons
Entering the United States...
Residents and Nonresidents

FOLLOW THESE HINTS AND SPEED
YOUR WAY THROUGH CUSTOMS ...

the Animal Inspection and Quarantine Branch, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C., for information.

PETS

The entry of pets (cats, dogs, monkeys, and psittacine birds, such as parakeets and parrots) and of disease-producing agents and vectors of public health importance is subject to the regulations of the Public Health Service, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. If you wish information regarding such importations, communicate with the Surgeon General, Public Health Service, Washington 25, D. C., or contact the nearest Public Health Service quarantine officer.

FOREIGN ARTICLES BEARING A TRADE-MARK

Any foreign article bearing a trade-mark recorded in the Treasury Department, such as many kinds of perfume, cannot be brought in without the consent of the trade-mark owner.

LISTING, PACKING, AND OPENING YOUR BAGGAGE

You can help the customs officer and yourself by cooperating. It will be helpful if, before you reach the port of entry, you will make a list of the articles acquired on your trip. Retain the sales slips and purchase orders covering these articles and have them so they will be available for ready examination by the customs officer.

Another hint, pack your baggage in a manner that will make inspection easy. Do your best to pack separately the articles you have acquired beyond United States borders. And, if the customs officer asks you to open the trunk of your car or any luggage, comply without hesitation. This will speed you through Customs.

Customs officers are stationed at the border and seaports for many reasons which may not be apparent to you. In addition to their regular duties, they enforce our narcotic laws and other laws. Do your part! If you are cooperative, the customs officer will be better able to protect you, the honest traveler, from the menace of the narcotics smuggler or other law violator who often masquerades as an honest citizen.

Then you, Mr. Tourist, can quickly pass through our ports without difficulty, and a courteous customs officer will say to you, "Goodby, Mr. Tourist: We appreciate your cooperation."

Goodby, Mr. Tourist, we appreciate your cooperation.

SPEED YOURSELF THROUGH CUSTOMS

CAUTION! These hints do not cover immigration requirements. If in doubt, see the immigration officer.

Tourist travel among nations not only creates good will but also supplies part of the money that finances world trade. In your travel, help us to serve you better by reading these general hints about the U. S. Customs and other laws. The full requirements of law and regulations cannot, of course, be spelled out in this small leaflet. So, when in doubt, ASK!! While abroad, you may consult the nearest Consular Office. In the United States, any customs officer will be glad to assist you.

RALPH KELLY, Commissioner
Bureau of Customs, U. S. Treasury Department

FOREIGN CURRENCY

You may avoid loss in the exchange and re-exchange of currency by consulting a local or foreign bank or travel information service, before leaving or entering the United States.

RESIDENTS

A REMINDER ABOUT ARTICLES NOT BROUGHT IN WITH YOU.—If articles are being shipped to you either before or after you return to the United States, obtain from the vessel or airline, merchant or postmaster, a label bearing the inscription—"ATTENTION U. S. CUSTOMS—TOURIST PURCHASE ENCLOSED," paste it on the package, and be sure to describe the articles in your declaration when you arrive. This will expedite their clearance.

PROHIBITED AND RESTRICTED ARTICLES

Whether you are a resident or nonresident, you may pay duty (and internal-revenue tax if any is due) on any article which is not entitled to free entry, provided the article is allowed to be brought into the United States. If under the law the article is not allowed to be brought into this country, the customs officer cannot permit you to have it. Consult a customs officer if you have any doubt whether a particular article may be brought into the United States. Please read the following carefully.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES, PLANTS, AND PLANT PRODUCTS

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is responsible for preventing the entry of injurious insect pests and plant diseases into this country from foreign lands. For this reason, the Bureau of Customs cooperates with the Department of Agriculture in enforcing special regulations affecting fruits, vegetables, plants and plant products. You cannot bring in certain specified fruits, vegetables, plants, cuttings, and seeds. Other kinds of plants and unprocessed plant products must be inspected or treated before you can bring them in.

If you know ahead of time that you want to bring in plants and plant products, the best way to avoid any difficulty or delay is to make arrangements in advance. Applications for import permits or requests for information on such importations should be addressed to the Import and Permit Unit, Plant Quarantine Branch, 209 River Street, Hoboken, N. J.

In any event, declare all plants and unprocessed agricultural products in your possession to the Plant Quarantine Inspector or customs officer at the United States port of entry. Even a single plant, fruit, or vegetable should be presented for inspection, no matter how inconsequential or free of pests it may appear to be.

With a little thought and a moment's time, you can help to prevent the entry of injurious insects and plant diseases. Failure to declare plants and plant products may result in further costly and often irreparable damage to the agriculture of this country through introduction of dangerous plant pests.

LIVESTOCK AND MEATS

The Bureau of Customs also cooperates with the Department of Agriculture in enforcing laws and regulations aimed at preventing the entry of foreign animal diseases that could seriously threaten the livestock industry of the United States. The Department is particularly concerned about rinderpest and foot-and-mouth disease. It has been estimated that if foot-and-mouth disease, for example, were to gain entrance into this country and become established, the annual loss would exceed $200 million. The entry of fresh, chilled, or frozen meats from cloven-footed animals (cattle, sheep, goats, swine, deer, antelope, etc.) from any country in which rinderpest or foot-and-mouth disease is known to exist is prohibited. That includes practically every country of the world. The entry of foreign cured and cooked meats, such as bacon, hams, sausages, bologna, salami, and the like, is restricted under such specialized requirements that the average tourist could not conform to them. So, for all practical purposes, you may consider cured and cooked meats prohibited. You may bring in dressed poultry if it has been drawn and the heads and feet removed.

You cannot bring in cloven-footed animals or organs, glands, extracts, or secretions, from such animals from any country infected with rinderpest or foot-and-mouth disease. You may bring in live poultry (including eggs for hatching) if you have a permit from the Animal Inspection and Quarantine Branch, U. S. Department of Agriculture, in Washington, D. C.

Prohibited animals, meats, or meat products must be seized by Customs or Department of Agriculture inspectors at ports of entry and destroyed unless they are immediately returned to the country of origin.

Should there be any doubt as to whether certain animals or products may or may not be brought into this country, write to the Animal Inspection and Quarantine Branch, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C., for information.

The Curt Teich Postcard Archives Collection is widely regarded as the largest public collection of postcards and related materials in the United States. When received at the Newberry Library it was estimated at 2.5 million items, and well over a half-million unique postcard images.

The postcards include a range of subjects and genres: rural vistas and urban skylines, tourist attractions and emergent industries, domestic scenes and global conflicts. Standing at the intersection of American commerce and visual culture, they demonstrate the country's evolving conception of itself and its place in the world during the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

PLEASE NOTE:

- This digital collection is derived from an in-house database used for inventory and reference. Of the approximately 400,000 postcard records presented here, only 18,000 have accompanying low-resolution digital images.
- Users should be aware that some of the images and text on postcards and transcribed into descriptions may be considered offensive. The content has been provided here for historical research and educational purposes.
